Yes No Maybe So

School's out! But that wonderful summer freedom goes hand-in-hand with some predictable hazards as well. June is National Safety Month, so now is a good time to review some basic tips to keep summer on the safe side for kids and grownups alike:

- Outdoors: Wear sunscreen, dress for the weather, stay hydrated, take cooling shade breaks, and wear insect repellent (especially in areas where ticks are present). Practice fire safety around the campfire and when barbecuing.
- Water safety: Know how to swim, and if possible, learn lifesaving and CPR as well. Be sure your pool or beach has a lifeguard on duty, and wear life jackets for boating, water-skiing, etc.
- Auto safety: Buckle up, follow traffic laws, and practice defensive driving on summer-crowded highways. Of course, NEVER leave little kids or pets closed up in a hot car.
- Household: Falls are a big cause of household injuries, so fix bannisters, kid-proof with safety gates, and pick up clutter. And to avoid another frequent cause of injury, keep all hazardous substances clearly labeled and out of reach of children.
- Sports: Keep cool and hydrated, and use sport-specific protective gear such as helmets.

With some commonsense precautions, you can enjoy an active, injury-free summer. Have a great time!
